

Nursery Programme Progression Framework

A progression framework for developing phonological awareness in Nursery through play, interaction and early phonics experiences.

Introduction

The Nursery Programme is designed to reflect a clear and developmentally appropriate progression of phonological and early phonemic awareness, aligned with EYFS principles and nursery phonics pedagogy. The framework focuses on how children engage with sound, supporting progression from early awareness and exploration to confident, independent application.

Structure of the Programme

The Nursery phonics programme is organised into four progressive steps which together support the development of children's phonological and early phonemic awareness. These steps are designed to be followed in sequence, with each step building on and extending the knowledge and skills developed in the previous one. This ensures that children develop secure foundations in listening, speaking and phonological awareness before moving on to more complex skills. Practitioners should ensure children are confident within each step before introducing the next, while continuing to provide opportunities for consolidation and revisiting prior learning.

- Step 1: Tuning In
Focuses on developing children's ability to listen to and notice sounds in their environment, including instrumental and body percussion sounds. Children learn to attend to sound, distinguish between different types of sound and begin to describe what they hear. Strong listening and sound discrimination skills are essential for children to hear, distinguish and work with sounds in words, underpinning all later phonics learning.
- Step 2: Vocalising & Word Play
Supports children in using their voice to explore sounds, rhythm and patterns in language. Children develop control of speech sounds and begin to recognise patterns such as rhyme and alliteration. An awareness of rhythm, rhyme and sound patterns helps children to understand how words are structured, supporting early phonological awareness and later success in blending and segmenting.
- Step 3: Sequencing & Sound Talk
Develops children's ability to hear and work with sounds within words. Children begin to blend sounds together and break words into individual sounds, forming a key foundation for later phonics learning. Blending and segmenting are the core skills required for reading and spelling in phonics, making this a crucial bridge between early sound awareness and formal phonics teaching.
- Step 4: Linking Letters & Sounds
Introduces children to a small number of phonemes alongside their corresponding graphemes. The focus remains on hearing, saying and recognising sounds while beginning to make connections between sounds and letters. Making connections between sounds and letters prepares children for systematic phonics instruction, supporting them to apply their phonological knowledge to early reading and writing.

Together, these steps provide a structured and developmentally appropriate progression, ensuring children build secure foundations for phonics through listening, speaking and play-based experiences.

Progression Overview

Within each step progression is organised into three developmental levels (Emerging, Developing and Secure) which reflect increasing control and independence in children's engagement with sound. These levels are used to support observation, assessment and planning, rather than to label children by age or expectation.

Level Descriptors

Level 1: Emerging

Children begin to notice, explore and join in

At Level 1, children are developing early awareness of sound. Assessment focuses on noticing sounds, exploring them through play, and joining in alongside adults and peers. Children at this stage are not expected to reproduce patterns accurately or make deliberate choices. Value is placed on participation, attention and shared experiences, reflecting early auditory development and supporting inclusive practice.

Level 2: Developing

Children identify, copy and begin to manipulate

Level 2 marks a shift from passive engagement to intentional interaction.

Children begin to identify and name features of sound. They deliberately copy what has been modelled and manipulate sounds in simple, supported ways. At this stage, children are starting to exert control over sound but continue to rely on adult modelling and scaffolding. Accuracy develops through repetition and guided practice rather than independence.

Level 3: Secure

Children describe, compare, explain, recreate, and applying independently

At Level 3, children demonstrate secure phonological awareness skills.

They can describe and compare sounds and follow instructions accurately. They create their own sound patterns and apply phonological skills independently across contexts.

This level represents readiness to apply phonological awareness confidently and flexibly, forming a secure foundation for the introduction of grapheme-phoneme correspondences.

Level 3+

(Linking Letters & Sounds only)

Level 3+ is an extension of level 3, rather than a new developmental stage. Children move beyond hearing phonemes to beginning to match them to graphemes. We recommend that this is introduced only once children are secure in Tuning In, Vocalising & Word Play and Sequencing & Sound Talk. The focus is on familiarising children with a small set of grapheme-phoneme correspondences through sound, action and oral work. All skills in 'Linking Letters & Sounds' remain rooted in nursery phonics pedagogy processes and do not involve expectations of independent reading or writing. This ensures continuity and clarity, supporting readiness for moving into a Systematic Synthetic Phonics programme without accelerating children prematurely.

Summary of Approach

This progression framework supports the monitoring of children's phonological and early phonemic awareness within the Nursery programme. It aligns with the EYFS Statutory Framework and Development Matters (2021) guidance.

The progression map is organised into three developmental levels, with an additional Level 3+ extension in Linking Letters and Sounds. These levels reflect how children engage with sound over time. This progression supports practitioners to recognise development, plan next steps and maintain a consistent approach to assessment.

Alignment with Phonics

The progression map within Tuning In, Vocalising and Word Play and Sequencing and Sound Talk collectively covers the full range of phonological awareness skills, including listening, rhythm and rhyme, alliteration, voice sounds and oral blending and segmenting.

The Linking Letters and Sounds section builds on secure phonological awareness learning and introduces early grapheme phoneme awareness through oral and auditory activities only. There are no expectations of independent reading or writing at this stage.

Wider Learning

Although this framework focuses specifically on phonological awareness, it supports learning across other areas of the EYFS. Skills such as attention, listening, vocabulary development, comprehension, confidence in speaking and turn-taking are developed through high-quality interactions, stories, songs, play and adult modelling.

These wider skills are intentionally supported through provision and practice, rather than assessed through discrete phonics statements. This ensures assessment remains focused, proportionate and developmentally appropriate.

Final Note

This framework provides a clear and consistent approach to tracking children's phonological development in Nursery. It supports professional judgement, avoids over-assessment, and ensures children build secure foundations for future phonics learning within a broad and balanced early years curriculum.

Activity Overview

The Nursery phonics programme is delivered through a range of structured, play-based activities within each step. The activities within each step are designed to support the development of the skills outlined in the progression map, providing opportunities for children to demonstrate and develop these skills at different levels of independence and complexity.

Progression from Level 1 to Level 3 is reflected through the structure, delivery and cognitive demand of the activities, rather than through separate tasks. Activities provide repeated opportunities for children to develop and apply their phonological awareness skills in engaging and meaningful ways, supporting consolidation, confidence and secure learning over time.

Each step includes a set of themed, character-led activities, with five to six activities at each developmental level. The activities are designed around familiar monster characters to support engagement, continuity and enjoyment, while gradually increasing in skill level, listening demand and cognitive complexity in line with the progression statements.

Activities are categorised by type to support practitioners in understanding how activities may be revisited, adapted and extended over time. Opportunities for repetition are built into the programme to support consolidation and confidence where needed; however, practitioners should use professional judgement to determine the pace, repetition and level of challenge appropriate for their children. Decisions should be informed by children's stage of development, confidence, concentration, listening skills, engagement and security of learning.

We recommend that practitioners introduce activities in sequence, as numbered, while selecting the most appropriate developmental level for the children. Depending on children's needs, practitioners may choose to remain within a single level for a period of time or work progressively across Levels 1 to 3 within a character theme. Practitioners do not need to complete every character activity or repeat every activity before moving on to the next step if children are demonstrating secure understanding and readiness to progress.

Activity Types

All activities within the Nursery phonics programme are designed to be repeated where needed to support children's confidence, understanding and secure acquisition of the learning objectives. Repetition provides opportunities for children to revisit, practise and consolidate skills through familiar routines and playful experiences.

Optional Repeat: These activities may be repeated in the same format where children would benefit from additional familiarity, confidence and participation in the skill being developed.

Optional Repeat with Variation: These activities may be repeated using different sound sets, words, objects, patterns or contexts where children would benefit from further opportunities to practise and apply the same skill in different ways.

Optional Repeat and Build with Variation: These activities may be revisited and gradually extended over time where appropriate. Activities may include sets that begin with simple patterns, structures or sound combinations, which can then be adapted, extended or combined to develop greater control, accuracy and independence as children become more secure.

Core Level 3 activities may extend up to 10 minutes depending on children's engagement, concentration, listening skills and level of participation.

Level 1 activities for additional support activities are typically delivered in short sessions of approximately 5 minutes.

Level 2 activities for support activities may extend up to 10 minutes.

The tables below provide an overview of each activity, including the activity type, any available variation sets and suggested delivery guidance.
